"Don't you think my pa is showing his age a great deal more than usual?" asked the lad boy of the grocery man, as he took a smoked herring out of a box and peeled off the skin with a broken-bladed jack knife, and split it open and ripped off the bone, threw the head at a cat, and took some crackers and began to eat.

"Well, I don't know but he does look as though he was getting old," said the grocery man, as he took a piece of yellow wrapping paper, and charged the boy's poor old father with a dozen herrings and a pound of crackers; "but there is no wonder he is getting old. I wouldn't go through what your father has the last year for $1,000,000. I tell you, boy, when your father is dead, and you get a step-father and he makes you walk the chalk mark, you will realize what a bonanza you have fooled yourself out of by killing off your father. The way I figure it, your father will last about six months, and you ought to treat him right the little time he has to live."

"Well, I am going to," said the boy, as he picked the herring bones out of his teeth with a piece of a match that he sharpened with his knife. "But I don't believe in borrowing trouble about a stepfather so long before hand. I don't think ma could get a man to step into pa's shoes, as long as I lived, not if she was inlaid with diamonds, and owned a brewery. There are brave men, I know, that are on the marry, but none of them would want to be a stepfather to a cherubim like me, except he got pretty good wages. And then, since pa was dissected he is going to lead a different life, and I guess I will make a man of him, if he holds out. We got him to join the Good Templars last night."

"No, you don't tell me," said the grocery man, as he thought that his trade in cider for mince pies would be cut off. "So you got him into the Good Templars, eh?"

"Well, he thinks he has joined the Good Templars, so it is all the same. You see, my chum and me have been going to a private gymnasium on the west side, kept by a Dutchman, and in a back room he has all the tools for getting up muscle. There, look at that arm," said the boy as he rolled up his sleeve and showed a muscle about as big as an oyster. "That is the result of training at the gymnasium. Before I took lessons I hadn't any more muscle than you have got. Well, the Dutchman was going to a dance on the South Side the other night, and he asked my chum to tend the gymnasium, and I told pa if he would join the Good Templars that night there wouldn't be many at the lodge, and he wouldn't be so embarrassed, and as I was one of the officers of the lodge I would put it to him right, and he said he would go, so my chum got five other boys to help us put him through. So we steered him down to the gymnasium and made him rap on the storm-door outside, and I said who comes there, and he said it was a pilgrim who wanted to join our sublime order. I asked him if he had made up his mind to turn from the ways of a hyena, and adopt the customs of the truly good, and he said if he knew his own heart he had, and then I told him to come in out of the snow and take off his pants. He kicked a little at taking off his pants, because it was cold out there in the storm-door dog-house, but I told him they all had to do it. That prince, potentates and paupers all had to come to it. He asked me how it was when we initiated women, and I told him women never took this degree. He pulled off his pants and wanted a check for them, but I told him the grand mogul would hold his clothes, and then I blindfolded him, and with a base-ball club I pounded on the door as I walked him around the gymnasium, while the lodge, headed by my chum, sung 'We won't go home till morning.' Then I stopped in front of the ice-water tank and said: 'Grand Worthy Duke, I bring before you a pilgrim who has drank of the dregs until his stomach won't hold water, and who desires to swear off.' The grand mogul asked me if he was worthy and well qualified, and I told him that he had been drunk more or less since the reunion last summer, which ought to qualify him. Then the grand mogul made pa repeat the most blood-curdling oath, in which pa agreed if he ever drank another drop, to allow anybody to pull his toe-nails out with tweezers, to have his liver dug out and fed to dogs, his head chopped off, and his eyes removed. Then the mogul said he would brand the candidate on the bare back with the initial letters of our order, 'G. T.', that all might read how a brand had been snatched from the burning. You'd a died to see pa flinch when I pulled up his shirt and got ready to brand him. My chum got a piece of ice out of the water-cooler, and just as he clapped it onto pa's back, I burned a piece of horse's hoof in the candle and held it to pa's nose, and I guess pa actually thought it was his burning skin that he smelled. He jumped about six feet and said, 'Great heavens, what you dewin?' and then he began to roll over a barrel which I had arranged for him. Pa thought he was going down cellar, and he hung to the barrel, but he was on top half the time. When pa and the barrel got through fighting I was beside him, and I said, 'Calm yourself and be prepared for the ordeal that is to follow.' Pa asked how much of this dum fooling there was, and he said he was sorry he joined. He said he could let licker alone without having the skin all burned off his back. I told pa to be brave and not weaken and all would be well. He wiped the perspiration off his face on the end of his shirt, and we put a belt around his body and hitched it to a tackle, and pulled him up so his feet were just off the floor, and then we talked as though we were away off, and I told my chum to look out that pa did not hit the gas fixtures, and pa actually thought he was being hauled clear up to the roof. I could see he was scared by the complexion of his hands and feet as they clawed the air. He actually sweat so the drops fell on the floor. Bime-by we let him down, and he was awfully relieved, though his feet were not more than two inches from the floor any of the time. We were just going to slide pa down a board with slivers in, to give him a realizing sense of the rough road a reformed man has to travel, and had got him straddle of the board, when the Dutchman came home from the dance full of booze, and he drove us boys out, and we left pa, and the Dutchman said, 'Vot you was doing here mit dose boys, you old duffer, and vere vas your pants?' and pulled off the handkerchief from his eyes, and the Dutchman said if he didn't get out in a holy minute he would kick the stuffing out of him; and pa got out. He took his pants and put them on out in the alley, and then we came up to pa and told him that was the third time the drunken Dutchman had broken up our lodge, but we should keep on doing good until we had redeemed every drunkard in Milwaukee, and pa said that was right and he would see us through if it cost every dollar he had. Then we took him home, and when ma asked if she couldn't join the lodge, too, pa said: 'Now, you take my advice and don't you never join no Good Templars. Your system could not stand the racket. Say, I want you to put some cold cream on my back.' 'I think pa will be a different man now, don't you?' The grocery man said that if he was that boy's pa for fifteen minutes he would be a different boy or there would be a funeral, and the boy took a handful of soft-shelled almonds and a few layers of raisins and skipped out.—Peck's Sun.

VARIOUS QUACKS.

Whoo—Fack with his own Pet Scheme—Cultivates the Field of Human Nature.

There have always been quacks—legals, quacks, theological quacks, scientific quacks, and medical quacks. Some of them are blandly fellows who argue and smile the world into believing in their favorite bit of bombing. Others are pompous and pretentious paranoics. But they make it pay. Men seem to love to be awindled stipulating only that it shall be neatly done.

The dear public are equally liberal to electric and magnetic fraud. (This fellow is a genuine fish in his line.
